Course Description

(3 credit hours) The inherent security in Blockchain technology vastly opens research areas in secure and trusted computing in Internet of Things (IoT) devices. This course provides an overview of IoT design and Blockchain technology and delves into research challenges in realizing Blockchain in edge devices, focusing on hardware/software co-design principles.

Course Pre-Requisites / Co-Requisites

- EEL 5764: Computer Architecture
- Programming experience with any high-level language (e.g., C/C++/Python) and hardware design experience (e.g., VHDL, Verilog, SystemC, etc.)
- Digital logic design

Course Objectives

With Blockchain technology poised to be bigger than the Internet, this course will cover fundamental concepts and topics including, but not limited to, Blockchain security, smart contracts, non-fungible tokens (NFTs), Bitcoin mining, consensus protocols, etc. as it pertains to Internet of Things (IoT) edge device architectures. Students will gain fundamental knowledge in IoT design principles and practices in constrained environments. Due to the rapidly advancing Blockchain field, current publications and relevant material will be selected to augment lecture material. Students will deliver presentations and write a short research paper on a relevant topic, gain smart contract programming experience, and participate in open discussion forums. Special guest speakers will be included.

In-Class Recording

Students are allowed to record video or audio of class lectures. However, the purposes for which these recordings may be used are strictly controlled. The only allowable purposes are (1) for personal educational use, (2) in connection with a complaint to the university, or (3) as evidence in, or in preparation for, a criminal or civil proceeding. All other purposes are prohibited. Specifically, students may not publish recorded lectures without the written consent of the instructor.

A “class lecture” is an educational presentation intended to inform or teach enrolled students about a particular subject, including any instructor-led discussions that form part of the presentation, and delivered by any instructor hired or appointed by the University, or by a guest instructor, as part of a University of Florida course. A class lecture does not include lab sessions, student presentations, clinical presentations such as patient history, academic exercises involving solely student participation, assessments (quizzes, tests, exams), field trips, private conversations between students in the class or between a student and the faculty or lecturer during a class session.

Publication without permission of the instructor is prohibited. To “publish” means to share, transmit, circulate, distribute, or provide access to a recording, regardless of format or medium, to another person (or persons), including but not limited to another student within the same class section. Additionally, a recording, or transcript of a recording, is considered published if it is posted on or uploaded to, in whole or in part, any media platform, including but not limited to social media, book, magazine, newspaper, leaflet, or third party note/tutoring services. A student who publishes a recording without written consent may be subject to a civil cause of action instituted by a person injured by the publication and/or discipline under UF Regulation 4.040 Student Honor Code and Student Conduct Code.

University Honesty Policy

UF students are bound by The Honor Pledge which states, “We, the members of the University of Florida community, pledge to hold ourselves and our peers to the highest standards of honor and integrity by abiding by the Honor Code. On all work submitted for credit by students at the University of Florida, the following pledge is either required or implied: “On my honor, I have neither given nor received unauthorized aid in doing this assignment.” The Conduct Code (<https://sccr.dso.ufl.edu/process/student-conduct-code/>) specifies a number of behaviors that are in violation of this code and the possible sanctions. If you have any questions or concerns, please consult with the instructor or TAs in this class.
